Consultation with a psychiatrist is available based on the seriousness of the crisis. Referrals to services are made as needed.

Crisis Intervention Unit – The Crisis Intervention Unit provides crisis assessment and response in order to divert individuals into treatment rather than arrest/incarceration. Crisis intervention staff; (bachelor's level case managers) are embedded with CCPD and dispatched along with crisis intervention trained officers in response to 911 calls involving individuals with behavioral health issues, including substance abuse/dependence. Crisis intervention teams' pair crisis intervention trained officers with mental health professionals to better identify, assess, and divert individuals into care.

Mobile Crisis Outreach Team – MCOT services focus on responding to crisis episodes within the community. Through the contracted crisis line case managers respond and assess individuals who are identified as being in a psychiatric crisis to determine the need for inpatient, outpatient, or ongoing services. Father of Two Turns Life Around Thanks to MHID

Patrick, a father of two children ages 15 and 18, descended into depression when his grandma passed away and dove into a deep spiral downward. He was isolated, angry, and trash talked and cyber bullied.

When he came to Nueces Center for Mental Health and Intellectual Disabilities (MHID), he received counseling, anger management, coping skills, medication management, physical health and group sessions. His support team is his case worker, Mom and probation officer.

Tiffany his caseworker says, “Patrick was very resistant in the beginning. He was quiet and angry. But one day, he slammed his phone down and said, ‘let’s do this.’”

Tiffany was encouraging and persistent, reminding him to come each week. He started to go to group, showed up to scheduled doctor’s appointments, became dedicated and made changes.

Patrick comments, “Everyone roots for you. They are friendly, positive people. They can help you when you’re ready.”

One day in group he was given the task of writing a letter to someone who angered or upset him; the letter became a personal journal of 3 pages. Patrick realized he didn’t need to trash talk or cyberbully anymore. He found alternatives to vent.

When someone is aggravating him, he thinks, “Why am I going to waste time arguing with this person.” This coping skill comes naturally to him now.

Patrick loves group and is a dedicated peer counselor. Instead of keeping things to himself, he discloses to others in group so that he can help them. For example, he told the group about Comfort Care which provides free rides for those with Medicare. Now, many of the group members use this for their means of transportation.

Patrick has definitely turned his life around since coming to MHID.

He says, “To be truthful, you can’t force someone to get help. They have to come around. MHID will be there when you’re ready. You can fix yourself with their help and help others do the same. I have done a total 180° change.”

MHID Case Manager Makes Youth “Feel Happy”

Like most boys ages 8 and 9, Jonathan and Matthew like to play with Legos, board games, and outdoor sports.

But life is not all fun and games.

Both boys are consumers at the Nueces Center for Mental Health and Intellectual Disabilities (MHID) Youth Services. There, they learn to cope and manage their behavioral and medical issues, ranging from ADHD to anger management to dyslexia to a possible diagnosis for autism.

Their grandmother Josie, who is their primary caregiver, has been bringing her grandsons to MHID for 5 years. They came to get psychological and case management services.

“I felt such relief, thank the Lord, that they would be getting the help they needed. I had been doing it all on my own. The case managers have been wonderful. They do a great job.”

Selina, their case manager for the past 3 months, says she’s been working closely with them on self control and coping skills.

Jonathan and Matthew have a picture of a turtle in a turtle shell on their refrigerator at home to remind them how to cope with anger. The picture was given to them by a case manager.

This “turtle technique” is a known therapy strategy for calming down that involves three steps for children to follow if they have a problem and feel themselves getting angry. Specifically, children are encouraged to go into their shell, take deep breaths and think of solutions, and come out of the shell when they are ready to solve the problem.

“They’ve made a lot of progress,” says Selina. “It’s a joy to help them grow and become more social, so they can make friends.”

Both boys are enrolled in public school and receive special resources there, but they continue to come to MHID every three months, plus their case worker visits their school twice a month. In addition, the boys have a family partner Cynthia, provided by MHID, who finds additional resources for the boys.

When Jonathan and Matthew are asked how they feel about Selina, they respond in unison: “Happy.”

Josie saw a commercial on TV about MHID, and that’s when she turned to her husband, and said let’s take the boys there. Josie likes the location, which is close to the highway and easy to get to.

Advice from Josie? “If you’re a single parent and struggling with your children’s behavior, come here.”

Here is MHID.

Intellectual & Developmental Disability Services

212 S. Staples | 361-884-9854

Local Intellectual and Developmental Disability Authority (LIDDA) Services

Who is eligible? Intellectual and Developmental Disability Services are available to individuals over 3 years of age who are diagnosed with an intellectual disability (IQ below 70), have a diagnosis on the Autism Spectrum, or who have certain other related conditions. Services are offered on a sliding fee scale based on insurance coverage and income.

What is the goal of IDD Services? Our programs consist of a wide array of services to help individuals achieve their highest level of independence and functioning. Once determined eligible, our team of staff work with individuals and their families to identify the areas of a person's life where they want to improve their skill set and abilities. The team then identifies what services and supports a person will need to try and reach their personal goals. We then implement services based on the program the individual is in, the service availability, and find additional resources in the community.

Intake & Assessment – Services available for individuals ages three and older who have an intellectual disability, a developmental disability, and in some programs certain other related conditions. Intakes are conducted to screen for crisis, assess needs, and to assist with placement on statewide waiver interest lists. A psychological assessment is then conducted to determine eligibility for services. Previous assessments may be reviewed to assist with the determination of eligibility. Any person not already in an IDD program who has a desire or need for any available IDD Service, must contact the Local Authority Intake Coordinator as eligibility must be determined and then the person will be admitted to services and assigned a service coordinator.

Community First Choice (CFC) – Individuals with Star Plus or Star Kids Medicaid receive services to help them live more independently in the community. Services include personal assistance with daily living skills, habilitation services to help them to care for themselves, emergency response services, and support for persons who choose to select and manage their own attendants.

General Revenue (GR) – Individuals receive services in their home and in the community including training, support, respite, and vocational or employment services. These services are limited in scope and are provided to those with the greatest need. Enrollment into an IDD waiver program disqualifies an individual from continuing in GR services.

Community Supports/Community Training – Provides individualized activities consistent with the person- directed plan, provided in the home and at various community locations as appropriate. Provides habilitation and support activities to improve the ability to perform daily living activities. Includes support services to the family to help preserve the family unity and prevent or limit out-of-home placement.

Respite – Provides short-term relief services for the unpaid caregiver when the caregiver is temporarily unavailable to provide support. Respite also provides personal assistance in daily living activities, functional living tasks, and supervision for safety and security. This service includes habilitation activities, social interaction, participation in leisure activities, and use of natural support system and typical community services available to all people.

Pre-Admission Screening and Resident Review (PASRR) – PASSR staff provide screening and engagement services to individuals in nursing facilities to determine the need for community based mental health services or intellectual and developmental disability services. If eligible for mental health services, individuals are referred to outpatient services to receive mental health care treatment to meet their needs and return them to the community and independence. If individuals are eligible for IDD, services are provided to individuals residing in or at risk of placement in a Nursing Facility. Individuals receive Specialized Services including occupational therapy, speech therapy, physical therapy, a customized manual wheelchair, and durable medical equipment from their Nursing Facilities. Individuals also receive additional Specialized Services from the LIDDA including Day Habilitation, Behavioral Support, Community Support, and Vocational Services. Individuals are also provided with Community Living Options to ensure they are aware of their ability to divert from a Nursing Facility before entering and their ability to transition to the community if they are already residing in a facility.

Service Coordination – A person-directed process to link, coordinate services, and support people to achieve their personal outcomes. Service Coordination includes writing, reviewing, revising, implementing and monitoring the plan of services provided. Service Coordinators assist people in securing and maintaining services in the community including education, training, transportation, specialized therapies, advocacy, food, housing, financial benefits and crisis management. Service Coordination is provided for individuals enrolled in General Revenue Services, the Texas Home Living waiver program, the Home and Community Based Services waiver program, the Community First Choice Program, and the Pre-Admission Screening and Resident Review Program.
